THE WAITER GIRL'S LIFE.

Something About the Good Angels Who Bring Hungry Men Their Dinners - Not Always Pretty, but Young - They Work from Six in the Morning Till Nine at Night, Never Take Tips, but Will Sometimes Flirt in Spite of the Rules.

U R R Y or you'll be late. It's half-past five now.

Some such salutation as this waits the pretty waiter girl these winter mornings and she must rise and walk quickly and wait perhaps a dozen squares, for riding is usually out of the question, since only the cars on certain lines run so early.
Promptly at six she is expected to reach the restaurant where she is employed and she is on duty until seven at night. If smart and capable she receives three dollars a week and board.

A man doesn't want to look at an old face while he's eating," she explains. "It is hard to get a place in a restaurant, for the girls never leave unless they get married. They know if they do leave they can't get back, and when you've been a waitress awhile you don't want to do any thing else.

You have your evenings after eight o'clock and one afternoon a week and perhaps Sundays.

Young, good natured and steady nerves are the requisites of the successful waiter girl.
It is not likely she will ever forget her first day as a waitress. Customers always notice a new face and if admiring glances are bestowed the other girls are jealous.

"It doesn't do to change her often," said the proprietor of a large restaurant. "If a man comes in and says: 'Where's Mollie?' and Mollie's gone, ten to one he goes, too.
You see, Mollie knew just how he liked his coffee and whether he preferred rare or well-done meat, and what dishes he disliked or fancied, and he saved time when she waited on him. So, of course, he misses Mollie, and perhaps twenty or thirty others miss her, too. You can see it doesn't pay to let Mollie go if a dollar more a week will keep her, but few restaurant girls get over four dollars and board, and three dollars a week is all most of them earn."

It is hard to believe that the awkward country lassie, who asks in a timid whisper if you will have tea or coffee, and on being told the latter, brings you milk, will soon develop into the accomplished waitress who can take a dozen orders at once and carry steadily a tray of heavy dishes and keep an open clean two days. Restaurant men agree in preferring country girls who have led quiet lives that they enjoy the excitement incident to an eating-house, and will least any one the novelty wears off, although once a waitress always a waitress seems to be the rule.

"A restaurant is a good place to study human nature," said a girl who had been waitress eight years in one place. "Did you ever know a man good-natured when he's hungry? Now, imagine waiting on fifty hungry men in an hour, and nearly every one of them calling to you to stop living and not be all day when you're hardly taking time to breathe. Then some one wants new's my soup over coming." "In a minute, sir," I tell him, and he'll take out his watch and say, 'Now, I'll time you,' and when the minute is up and no soup he's madder than ever.

"Four girls and myself have waited on six hundred men in three hours, and I took in the cash, too. We called this 'silver hash.' The man I dread waiting on is the one who orders a fifteen-cent dinner just because he's too stingy to pay for a fifty-cent meal. Four men are never any trouble; it's the mean rich ones I hate to serve in the day, and I'd rather wait on ten men than one woman. I never wait on a gentleman unless a gentleman will leave a quarter under his plate, but I put it in the cash drawer with a check."

What are called "half-time girls" work from eleven to three, thus helping through the busiest part of the day. These girls receive two dollars per week, and most of them have comfortable homes, only needing to earn their clothes. They are a well-dressed crowd, who talk about "going to the store," and would think it a great hardship to be obliged to rise at half-past five and work until seven, like the "full-time" girls.

Of course the popular restaurant girls are glad when Christmas comes and are often loaded down with gifts. Often a subscription book is started and the girls' friends put down their names for a certain amount. I heard of a waitress who received in this way thirty dollars besides being given several boxes of handkerchiefs, bottles of cologne, books and some ten pounds of candy. A girl who is no uncommon sight and certainly a holiday time the pretty waiter girl faces very well.

He Hated Christmas.

"I hate Christmas, dog gone it," said little Charlie Nelson, as he came rushing into the house without his sled and minus a portion of his ear.

"Goodness gracious! You little torment.
What has happened to you?" inquired his frightened mother.

"Bob Dugan wanted to ride on my sled, and I wouldn't let him 'cause he was with my face with snow. Then he tried to take my sled away, and I hit him with a piece of ice. Then he jumped on me and slapped me, and I hit him with a piece of ice. Then he jumped on me and slapped me, and I hit him with a piece of ice. Then
